Acknowledgement

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to everyone for providing their invaluable guidance, comments and suggestion throughout the course of project development. I would specially thank Prof. S. Dhole Sir for timely checking my progress constantly motivating me to work harder.

In this project, I hope to highlight the enormous opportunities presented by technology for making the application for internet service providers. In my desire to work this report I have in no way any claim to come out with a perfect piece of work.

I would also like to thank Our Head of Department Prof. S. Dhole sir for his invaluable guidance and immense involvement in our project and making required hardware available for us.

Visit report

A village on the outskirts of Aurangabad can give lessons on water distribution and civic management to the city administration. After getting round the clock water supply, Patoda villagers are set to get hot water free of cost thanks to the 12 units of solar water heater under installation.

The 3,350 residents of this tiny village located barely 15 km from the city are a happy lot. Though living in the parched Marathwada region, they don't have to face the water scarcity in the heat of the scorching summer.

Each household in the village gets water through the day, the supply monitored through installed water meters. With having the pay water tax based on actual consumption, the village gram panchayat has posted 100% water and property tax recovery over the past few years. This regular and sufficient income has allowed the gram panchayat to introduce innovative measures for the benefit of the villagers. The latest is the endeavour to set up 12 solar water heaters to supply hot water. The panchayat has already completed installation of six units of solar water heater and the work on other six units is going on.
